Cultural Diversity: Global Learning VALUE Rubric

Definition

“the ability to recognize the origins and influences of one’s own cultural heritage along with its limitations in providing all that one needs to know in the world. This includes the curiosity to learn respectfully about the cultural diversity of other people and on an individual level to traverse cultural boundaries to bridge differences and collaboratively reach common goals. On a systems level, the important skill of comparatively analyzing how cultures can be marked and assigned a place within power structures that determine hierarchies, inequalities, and opportunities and which can vary over time and place. This can include, but is not limited to, understanding race, ethnicity, gender, nationhood, religion, and class.”

Elements

- Recognize the origins, influences, and limitations in your own cultural origins
- Curiosity to learn respectfully about cultural diversity of other people, in order to bridge differences and collaborate toward common goals
- Comparatively analyze how cultures can be marked and assigned a place within power structures that determine hierarchies, inequalities, and opportunities and which can vary over time and place

Iceberg: Mapping Cultural Orientation Activity

Surface Culture

visible aspects of culture- sight, touch, smell, taste, hearing, etc.

Deep Culture

Unseen, intangible aspects of a culture- values, attitudes, concepts of the self and world, etc.

Directions for the Activity

A. Map your own cultural orientation by placing an X at the spot on the dotted line in the handout that most accurately reflects your values pertaining to the first continuum (monochronic, polychronic).

B. After you mark your response, consider discussing one or more of these questions with your group:

How does your cultural orientation map help you in your life?

How does your cultural orientation map hold you back in your life?

How is your cultural orientation map similar or different from your peers'?

Scale Descriptions

The GPI was designed so that anyone—regardless of age, race, culture, or national origin—can complete the survey. Despite common use by colleges and universities, the GPI scales do not exclusively focus on learning and development as a result of a specific collegiate experience (e.g., education/study abroad). The scales provide a starting point for understanding how students think (cognitive), how they view themselves (intrapersonal), and how they relate to others who are different (interpersonal).

The GPI scales are calculated from the core 35 items, which ask respondents to reply on a five-point Likert-type scale ranging from 1 (strongly disagree) to 5 (strongly agree). Three of the core 35 items are not associated with a scale. Eight of the core items are reverse coded to 1 (strongly agree) to 5 (strongly disagree) prior to calculating the GPI scales. Items are recoded so that a high mean score signifies more positive levels related to the specific dimension of the development of global perspective.

The GPI consists of six scales spanning the cognitive, intrapersonal, and interpersonal dimensions. Each dimension includes two scales. For each dimension, one scale reflects cultural development theory and the other reflects intercultural communication theory.

Theory	Cognitive Scales	Intrapersonal Scales	Interpersonal Scales
Cultural development	Knowing: complexity of thinking	Identity: self-acceptance and purpose	Social Responsibility: interdependence and social concern
Intercultural communication	Knowledge: knowledge of multicultural issues	Affect: respect and acceptance of cultural difference	Social Interactions: engaging with difference and cultural sensitivity

The Global Perspective Inventory (GPI) is protected by U.S. and International Copyright laws. Reproduction and distribution of the GPI is prohibited.

Common GPI Survey Questions

The common GPI Survey Questions, which include the core 35, are found on all GPI Forms (i.e., New Student, General, Study Abroad). These questions allow for comparison of student scores over time (e.g., pre-post).

Please rate your level of agreement with each statement.
